CARDIN FACES MIKES, QUESTIONS

Gerda Locks Door As Scandal Grows

Sukarno Sheds Power In Peaceful Takeover

JAKARTA (CP)—Army leaders under Lt. Gen. Suharto staged a peaceful takeover of power in Indonesia today and immediately banned the Communist party.

But Suharto, who made his move after talks with President Sukarno lasting until early today, also pledged in a radio broadcast that the Indonesian revolution will remain leftist, although not extreme leftist.

Suharto said he had been called in by Sukarno—"whom we all love"—to safeguard peace and security.

It was not immediately clear what President Sukarno's role would be under the new administration. Radio Jakarta said Sukarno had given his powers to Suharto.

They accused him of Communist sympathies. The first indication of what was happening came when crack troops and paracommandos moved into the city under the cover of darkness after days of mounting unrest by students engaged in anti-Communist demonstrations.

Heavy armor and armed troops today held a massive victory parade, widely cheered by hundreds of thousands of students and citizens.

While the parade was going on, Suharto issued, in President Sukarno's name, a decree banning the Indonesian Communist party.

Political fate of unpopular ministers, such as Subandoro and Basic Education Minister Sumardjo, was not yet known.

Key Ottawa Scandal Figure Lays Low In Munich Retreat

MUNICH, West Germany (AP)—Gerda Munsinger, a key figure in the Canadian sex-and-security scandal, kept herself behind locked apartment doors today and refused to see waiting reporters.

The manager of the large, modern apartment house, located in Munich's fashionable Schwabing district, asked reporters to leave and said other tenants were complaining. When they ignored his request, he called police who came and cleared the sidewalk and building entrance. Most reporters posted themselves further down the street.

Just before police came, Mrs. Munsinger's lawyer came out and told the press that the woman was not feeling well and would not be available for any comment.

Earlier today, reporters were told by the building caretaker that Mrs. Munsinger was not at home and there was no answer when the doorbell rang.

During the early afternoon, several unidentified persons were admitted to her apartment by the lawyer.

One of those admitted to the building was believed to be reporter Robert Reguly of the Toronto Star, who had interviewed the woman two days ago.

Earlier, Reguly had said at his hotel that Mrs. Munsinger had left her apartment to avoid being disturbed and to get much-needed rest. He said she had gone to a place not far from Munich, but declined to say where.

Rumors circulated in Munich that Mrs. Munsinger was negotiating with various publications for the rights to her story and for photographs.

During the morning Mrs. Munsinger's nameplate was taken from the list of tenants at the entrance to the building. The plate had spelled her name as Munsinger, and not Munsinger as reported from Canada.

Mrs. Munsinger—she was divorced from Michael Munsinger, now a New York City policeman—had lived in Canada in the late 1950s, leaving in 1961. After returning to West Germany, the tall blonde had worked for a time as a hotel secretary, but is no longer employed in that job.

Justice Minister Lucien Carlin charged that she had been engaged in espionage in Canada for the Communists. He also declared that "two or more" ministers in the former Progressive Conservative cabinet had been involved with her.

Bennett Retreats On Redistribution

VICTORIA (CP)—Premier Bennett backed down in the corridor face of heavy criticism on the government's proposed redistribution bill Friday and gave one extra seat to the Kootenays.

The move to amend the bill, introduced to the BC Legislature by Provincial Secretary Black, was seen by observers as capitulation to a concerted attack by Kootenay MLAs on both sides of the House.

Mr. Bennett told the legislature that the proposed redistribution bill would be split.

The riding under the redistribution had been enlarged to take in parts of the present Columbia, Kaslo-Slocan and Revelstoke ridings.

Gemini Pair Feeling Fine

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The Gemini 8 astronauts, said by doctors to be in fine physical shape, today confer with project officials to review all aspects of next Tuesday's space flight.

Reports will be made on readiness of the two rockets involved in the launching, the spacecraft, mission control centre, worldwide tracking network and recovery forces.

Preliminary countdown starts tonight.

Following the conference, astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and David R. Scott planned a long session in a spacecraft simulator rehearsing various phases of the three-day journey.

They will concentrate on the attempt to catch and hook up with an Agena space vehicle on the first day and Scott's space walk of nearly 2½ hours on the second day.

An Atlas-Agena is to hurl the Agena into orbit at 10 a.m. EST Tuesday. The astronauts are to ride a Titan II into space at 11:41 a.m. to start a 5½-hour pursuit.

The weatherman forecast satisfactory conditions for Tuesday.

Paris Spells NATO Moves

PARIS (C)—France has told its NATO partners it expects two top military headquarters of the alliance to be transferred from French soil.

The French foreign ministry today released the text of diplomatic notes delivered Thursday and Friday to NATO's other 14 member nations, including Canada, in which it explained its reasons for withdrawing from the organization's military structure.

The text said France had decided to act unilaterally after coming to the conclusion that any negotiations on the subject would lead to an unsatisfactory result from the French viewpoint.

The text of the note differed slightly for some nations. The version sent to the United States and Canada had a supplementary portion dealing with bases of those organizations that France wants moved to another country are Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe and Allied Forces, Central Europe, which covers land, air and sea forces in the central sector. S.H.A.P.E. is located on the outskirts of Paris. The central European command is at Fontainebleau.

Growers Not Too Successful In Attempts To Gain Aid

Attempts to gain more financial aid for Okanagan growers who suffered crop losses last year are not meeting with much success.

The executive of the British Columbia Fruit Growers Association said in a statement released Friday it is not happy with provincial government action on efforts to obtain more aid for growers from Victoria and Ottawa.

The executive has exchanged correspondence with provincial Agriculture Minister F. X. Richter for the past month but has failed to get support for its extension proposals.

The proposals were first presented to Mr. Richter Feb. 7 in Victoria.

SLIDING SCALE

They included the proposal to extend the present maximum crop assistance limit of $4,000 on a sliding scale to be useful and more equitable than presently set out in the program.

This approach was taken to avoid disruption in the present program and delays in cheques being sent to growers, and to help service the large area of need the program overlooked.

The executive feels, this support not being obtained, that the program in effect will be continued unchanged. Any extension of the program presented to the federal government without the support of the provincial government, would in all likelihood be rejected, the executive said.

I Knew Her Socially—Sevigny

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons spent a second day in uproar Friday over the Gerda Munsinger affair.

While the House was debating without decision what action should be taken over charges by Justice Minister Carlin that John Diefenbaker mishandled the Munsinger case when he was prime minister, there were these dramatic developments:

—The Toronto Star published an interview with Gerda Munsinger from Munich, the first word that the woman in the sex-and-security allegations was not dead, as Mr. Carlin had reported.

—The story quoted her as claiming she was friendly with and was given a birthstone ring by Pierre Sevigny, former Conservative associate defence minister.

—Mr. Sevigny admitted in a statement at Montreal that he knew the woman during her stay in Canada but said their relationship was strictly social.

—Prime Minister Pearson confirmed that the government would draft terms of reference for its proposed judicial inquiry into the Munsinger affair.

PIERRE SEVIGNY ... states case described as once involved in espionage. They wanted the names in the case.

—Mr. Carlin sat through the uproar without saying a word. After spending seven hours from the start of debate at 11 a.m. EST on this one question, the House adjourned and left the whole affair to be first item on the schedule Monday.

Snowslide On Snoqualmie Buries Driver Eight Hours

SEATTLE (AP)—A snowslide thundered down on the Snoqualmie Pass Highway east of North Bend Friday night and buried a man in his car more than eight hours.

Only the air in the car saved the life of George Foster, an FBI agent from Wenatchee, and state troopers said he might not have survived had he been buried much longer.

Foster was placed in a hospital in North Bena, where attendants said he was in satisfactory condition, suffering from cuts and bruises.

His car was buried under tons of snow when the slide roared down a mountainside about 6 p.m. Friday near the snowshed on the east side of the summit, about 26 miles east of North Bend.

State troopers said they discovered one car partly buried and rescued its occupants. Highway department crewmen then probed to see if any more cars were buried. They didn't locate Foster's car immediately, and he told troopers he could hear bulldozers running back and forth on the snow above his partly crushed car as they started clearing the highway.

Foster lay in the car barely able to move under its smashed roof. About 2:15 a.m., his car was discovered and he was rescued and rushed to the hospital.

Foster, recently transferred to the Seattle FBI office, was returning to Wenatchee for the weekend.

Mrs. Foster left the couple's five children in Wenatchee and rushed to the hospital.

"All I can say right now," she told a reporter, "is that he's lucky to be alive."

B.C. Marks Centennial

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia officially began the celebration of its 100th birthday Friday night.

Premier Bennett lit a torch which was carried from a hotel to Victoria's inner harbour by a Queen Scout. There the torch was used to ignite a floating bonfire.

At the same time 200 bonfires were lit by scouts all over B.C.

As the flames from the bonfire reflected in the water, the Fifth (B.C.) Field Battery fired 17 rounds, reproducing the salute fired 118 years ago when the colony of Vancouver Island was established.

Fireworks lit the sky and the HMCS Suroviale was illuminated with lights for the occasion.

One hundred years ago Nov. 18 a proclamation was read at New Westminster and Victoria, declaring the union of the colonies of Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The reason behind the official opening Friday night was because on March 11, 1850, Richard Blanshard, B.C.'s first governor, relieved the Hudson's Bay Company of jurisdiction over Vancouver Island.

AFFECTS 2 RCAF UNITS

Canada maintains RCAF strike squadrons at Marville and Metz and has some 2,120 military personnel in France.

Meanwhile in Paris, American officials said today the United States is considering whether to take back its nuclear warheads now in French hands if France withdraws its forces from NATO command.

Accident Kills Safety Chief

QUESNEL (CP)—Gordon Smith, 41, head of the safety committee at a plywood plant here, was killed Friday when a crane with which he was working touched a 12,000-volt power line.

Smith and a fellow workman were holding the crane line, attempting to hook it into a load, when the crane touched the power line. Frank Neighbor, a forced burns to his hands and feet.

Both men were working at the Weldwood of Canada Ltd. plywood plant here.

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—A sharp earthquake struck Taipei at 12:32 a.m. Sunday, giving the city's 1,999,000 inhabitants a frightening jolt.

Hatch Trouble Confronts Astronauts

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—A spacecraft hatch-closing problem that could affect Tuesday's Gemini 8 launch date developed today. Astronaut David R. Scott, who is to take a lengthy space walk during the flight, was summoned to determine whether he could close the hatch in its present condition.

Munsinger Case Smacks Of 'McCarthyism'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Dalton Camp, president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada, said here McCarthyism is "the best and kindest way" of describing Justice Minister Carlin's handling of the Munsinger sex-and-spy case.

French Police Take Over From Nationalist Chinese

PARIS (AP)—French police today occupied the building used by the Nationalist Chinese delegation to UNESCO—the old Nationalist Chinese Embassy—which has been a source of conflict between Nationalist and Communist China for the last two years.

Three uniformed French police and six plain clothemen were outside the building early today, and others were inside. The Nationalist Chinese nameplate was removed from the door.

The police stationed outside the building refused to give any information. It was impossible to know what was happening inside or whether any Chinese representatives were present at the time of the police move.

The building was used for the Nationalist Chinese Embassy and the delegation to UNESCO during the days when France maintained diplomatic relations with Nationalist China.

But on Jan. 27, 1944, France recognized Communist China. Under French pressure, Nationalist China broke relations with France Feb. 19, 1944. Before making the break, however, the Nationalist Chinese listed the building as being the seat of the delegation to UNESCO.

When the Communist Chinese diplomatic mission arrived in Paris, it was forced to look for a new building. A big house was purchased in suburban Neuilly as the embassy and an apartment building nearby was acquired to house the embassy staff and other offices.

Bank Of Canada Ups Interest In Bid To Settle Economy

OTTAWA (CP)—The Bank of Canada took its interest rate up a notch Friday, punctuating a warning by a bank Governor Louis Rasminsky that Canada risks overloading its economy.

The announcement of the increase was a corollary to his annual report, released three hours earlier.

But the increase, to 5 1/2 per cent from 4 1/2 per cent, taking effect Monday, had its immediate cause too. Major U.S. banks raised their prime rate on short-term business loans to 5 1/2 per cent from five per cent Thursday.

Mr. Rasminsky said the bank's action "reflected the view that in the present state of the economy, some moderation of the rate of growth of overall demand was desirable."

That echoed his words in the report: That the economy could be overloaded with demands in excess of its ability to produce goods and services.

The bank rate is the interest the state-owned central bank charges chartered banks on loans. It is more meaningful as a signal of bank policy than as a mandatory device.

The Bank of Canada takes its direct action on rates through the weekly auction of government treasury bills.

In calling for improved productivity, the report makes virtually the same appeal as did the Economic Council of Canada in its review of the business and social scene made public in January.

Productivity is the rate at which the country uses land, labor, plant and machinery, and managerial skills to produce. Non-farm output per person employed rose less than two per cent last year, substantially less than the gain achieved in 1964.

The Economic Council put education in the forefront of needs for productivity improvement.

The bank governor's annual report said the productive capacity of the country is growing at a substantial rate. Recent high levels of investment in plant and equipment provide the room for productivity growth by Canada's rapidly growing labor force.

The problem, as the central bank sees it, is to strike a balance between the demand for goods and services and the supply of them.

With a buoyant employment and incomes and little slack in the economy, there is danger of overloading. Rather than use fiscal measures—mainly, higher taxes and stretched-out government spending—to dampen demand, Mr. Rasminsky would prefer measures to encourage supply.

Third Man Of Trio Nabbed After Battle At Phillipsburg

PHILLIPSBURG, Que. (CP)—A third man, Anthony Miller, 27, of Bedford was arrested on a charge of armed robbery Monday, was captured in an abandoned house Friday night in this community 3 miles southeast of Montreal.

Police said Kyling was captured in the same manner as his brother Carl, 21, also sought on a warrant, Carl was nabbed 10 miles north of Phillipsburg, when police opened up with tear gas.

Provincial police conducted Friday's raid. Kyling was taken to Montreal for arraignment.

The Kyling brothers were being sought in connection with a gunbattle and chase at a provincial police roadblock Monday near Havelock, Que. 25 miles southwest of Montreal.

Another man, Anthony Miller, 27, of Bedford was arrested on a charge of armed robbery Monday after the start of the chase in which a police officer was shot in the hand and the brothers fled in a stolen car.

The roadblock had been set up after three men sped away from a police cruiser attempting to stop a car to question the occupants.

Police said the brothers were recently released on bail pending trial on an armed robbery charge resulting from the hijacking of a truckload of coffins.

Viscount Amory B.C.'s Guest At Victoria Centennial Feast

VICTORIA (CP) — Special guest at the B.C. Centennial Dinner held at the Empress Hotel ballroom here Friday night was Viscount Amory, governor of the Hudson's Bay Company.

To mark the occasion, the Viscount presented Premier Bennett with a replica of a silver gilt canoe made in 1830.

Speaking of the canoe the Viscount said "our company feels that it has been our privilege to have participated in the historic events we are celebrating today, and to accept our heart-felt good wishes for the challenging days that lie ahead."

Viscount Amory had much to say about British Columbia and began by noting how amazed the pioneers would be if they could see B.C. today.

"And as amazed perhaps we ourselves would be if we could steal a preview of the B.C. of 2066," he said.

"Up and down it has experienced, but each phase has been followed by a fresh surging wave which has carried the province forward to new levels of expansion and achievement," the Viscount added.

Viscount Amory, who was for two years British High Commissioner in Ottawa before his present appointment, said his company would continue to develop its operations in B.C.

Today, British Columbia is the fastest-growing area in Canada and it should "hitch its wagon to a star" and not be ashamed of its progressive young men and women, he said.

VISCOUNT AMORY ... Victoria guest

Viscount Amory said it was "that remarkable man, James Douglas, who personified co-operation between the Crown and the Hudson's Bay Company."

MacKenzie, Fraser, Thompson, George Simpson—"we are the heirs of their heroism."

Chualo Will Make a Bid To Button Louisville Lip

TORONTO (CP)—George Chualo, unable to win the World Boxing Association heavyweight championship from Ernie Terrell last November, will now take a crack at Cassius Clay's version of the title here March 25.

That's the night Terrell and Clay were supposed to have clashed in a 15-round showdown, but Terrell Thursday refused to go through with it.

Officials, digging for a replacement, came up with Chualo, 205-pound Canadian heavyweight champion from Toronto who is ranked 10th by the WBA and was decisively outpointed by Terrell.

Despite his 11 losses and two draws in 32 fights with setbacks in two of his last three starts, Chualo got the nod on two counts. He was slated to meet the Clay-Terrell winner here in June anyway, and more important, he was available right now.

The fight, kicked out of New York, Chicago, Montreal and Verdun, Que., because of premeditated mob attacks and Clay's unpatriotic remarks about the United States' role in Viet Nam, won't be recognized as a world championship affair by the WBA now that its man, Terrell, is out.

NOT TITLE FIGHT
It isn't even regarded as a title fight by Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, the 17,000-seat arena where it is to be held.

"Without Terrell, there's no way we can bill this for the world championship," said Ballard, a key figure in arranging the Clay-Terrell bout.

Clay, undefeated in 22 bouts, has been regarded as the unofficial world champ since he defeated Sonny Liston in 1964 and beat him again in a rematch. He knocked out Floyd Patterson last November in Las Vegas.

Chualo's last start was Jan. 25 in London when he dropped a decision to Eduardo Corleto, an Italian. The Canadian has never been knocked down and Clay, showing unaccustomed modesty, said he thinks Chualo will give him a tougher fight than Terrell would have.

But New York bookmakers aren't impressed. They'll give you 5-to-1 odds if you bet on Chualo, but they won't take any bets on Clay.

Robert Arum, a lawyer for Main Bout Inc., which controls ancillary rights, said Clay will arrive here after seeing his draft board in Louisville, Ky., next Thursday.

Clay, currently training in Miami, was recently reclassified I-A for army duty after first being rejected.

PRICES STAY SAME
The fact that it really isn't a title fight hasn't altered ticket prices. Seats are scaled from $100 each at ringside down to $7.

And contract terms are unchanged. Clay will pick up 50 per cent of the live gate and 50 per cent of the ancillary rights. Chualo gets 20 per cent from each pot, the Gardens collects 30 per cent of the live gate and Main Bout pockets 30 per cent of the ancillary revenue.

Contracts were signed Friday after a delay while Arum got approval from six of Clay's 11 backers in Louisville.

Terrell was supposed to show here Thursday to sign a contract with Clay but didn't. He demanded expenses and guarantees amounting to $162,500 and didn't want to fight Chualo if he won. His asking price was too much for Main Bout, facing a loss of 100 of 280 TV-coverage theatres because of picketing threats over Clay's unpatriotic remarks.

Now the odds are that as few as 20 theatres will remain on the television hookup and the estimated $600,000 TV take has all but disappeared.

Seigny Stayed In Business After Quitting Tory Ranks

MONTREAL (CP) — Joseph Pierre Albert Seigny—author of This Game of Politics—was associate minister of defence under John Diefenbaker from August 20, 1959 until he resigned Feb. 9, 1963 over Canada's acquisition of nuclear arms.

Since then Mr. Seigny, a stockbroker, has been occupied principally by business interests in Montreal. He did not run in the Nov. 8 general election.

After his split with the Diefenbaker regime, Mr. Seigny lost his suburban Longueuil riding to Liberal Jean Pierre Cole by 2,954 votes in the 1963 general election.

His second book, about the game of politics, was published shortly before last year's election.

In it he detailed much of the background in the nuclear arms battle. His first book, Face a l'Ennemi, vividly describing life on the battlefield, won him an award from the French Academy in 1959.

The son of Albert Seigny, a member of the 1917 Sir Robert Borden cabinet, he was elected for the first time in the Longueuil riding in 1958.

Albert Seigny was made minister of inland revenue after being parliament's deputy speaker from 1954 through 1958, and was a former chief justice of Quebec.

The younger Seigny first tried politics in 1949 when, as a Progressive Conservative candidate in Ile de la Madeleine, he lost by 50 votes. He lost again seven years later in the Longueuil riding.

WAS DEPUTY SPEAKER
He was elected next year in the Diefenbaker sweep. Within two months he was appointed, as was his father before him, deputy speaker of the Commons. Fifteen months later he became associate defence minister.

Now 48, the tall, heavy-set man walks with a cane. Doctors had to amputate his left leg above the knee after a German shell exploded near him during a battle along the Rhine River in the Second World War.

He enlisted at the age of 16 in 1933. By war's outset he was a sergeant and was commissioned into the regular army the next year. He was posted overseas in 1942 as a captain.

He took part in the Normandy invasion, with the 4th Medium Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery. His duties were troop commander and forward-observation officer.

In 1946 he retired with rank of lieutenant-colonel. Among his decorations were those of Poland, France and Belgium.

In the late 1940s his vocational interests were in real estate, import-export and construction—then came politics in 1950.

Mr. Seigny holds a bachelor of commerce degree from Laval University.

Married to the former Corinne Alice Rosemary Kernan, he has three children: a daughter, Pierrette, 16, and two sons, Alberta, 15, and Bobby, 11.

'Something Big' Looms In Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — Refugees arriving by daily airlift from Cuba say there is a widespread feeling in their homeland that "something big" is going to happen.

"Nearly everybody has the impression there is great discontent within Fidel Castro's armed forces," said Jacinto Gutierrez, 43.

Others among 161 Cubans who arrived here Friday to start a new life in exile nodded agreement.

News of the arrest and sentencing of Rolando Cubela, former high Cuban army officer, for plotting to assassinate Castro has been the conversation piece in Cuba, the refugees said.

But Gutierrez, who lives four blocks from the University of Havana, said he saw no demonstrations on the campus. Rumors that there had been some in support of Cubela had circulated in the exile colony here.

Cubela, former student president, received a 25-year sentence.

The airlift, begun Dec. 1, has brought 12,353 refugees to Miami. A special airlift to 600 American citizens—and their families from Cuba, scheduled to have started Feb. 8, remained stalled.

U.S. authorities said they could not explain the delay.

Mobs Hold Violent Spree Over India's Food Crisis

NEW DELHI (CP) — Mobs burned down railway stations and tossed homemade bombs in the Calcutta area of India during the night as food riots went into their third day.

The situation in Calcutta and surrounding West Bengal state was quieter today than the previous two days of clashes between mobs and police units.

With the death toll now above 25, leftist leaders threatened even bigger demonstrations.

Only 1 state-owned bus was in operation on routes where scores normally move. Most shopkeepers shuttered their stores for the third consecutive day, creating additional food problems for the city's impoverished residents who normally keep on hand only food for one or two meals.

Home Minister G. L. Nanda, responsible for law and order, arrived in Calcutta from New Delhi with Food Minister Chidambaram Subramaniam.

These officials claim West Bengal's wave of violence is a premeditated assault on the New Delhi government's authority by pro-Chinese Communists and other leftists—and not spontaneous demonstrations against food shortages, as the leftists assert.

Meanwhile, in Amritsar, students protesting against a ruling Congress party decision to form a Punjab-speaking state burned buses and police jeeps today.

Demonstrating for the second successive day, more than 2,000 students defied a ban on processions and meetings and marched through the streets.

SEX-SECURITY SCANDAL

Back in the House Monday will be Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who was fishing in British Columbia when Mr. Cardin outlined his charges Thursday at a press conference that sparked the two-day Commons blow-up.

Conservatives, apparently trying to hold the debate open long enough for their leader to leap in Monday, were challenged to take label action against Mr. Cardin for his press conference statements.

Speeches and appeals from all sides of the House.

Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon), whose allegations about influence-peddling triggered last year's judicial inquiry into the Lucien Rivard affair, and a string of former Diefenbaker ministers led the assault.

New Democrat Leader Douglas backed their claim that Mr. Cardin's allegations had to be substantiated or withdrawn.

Creditiste Leader Colette asked that the Conservatives "stop being hypocritical and let us stop this shameful spectacle."

Social Credit Leader Thompson asked that members stop filibustering away the time of the House and resume regular business.

SAVES RING GIFT
The Toronto Star report on Gerda Munzinger said she was wearing a September birthstone ring that was the gift of a former cabinet minister.

It quoted her as saying she was friendly with Mr. Seigny, that he was her frequent companion on trips in the period from 1958 to 1960, and that she once went to an election banquet which Mr. Diefenbaker and most of his cabinet attended.

"If they keep pushing my name around in Canada," the statuesque blonde was quoted as saying, she would come over and tell all she knew.

The story also said she would want protection because she feared for her life from a Montreal businessman-racketeer.

Mr. Seigny issued a statement in Montreal late Friday saying he met a Mrs. Munzinger at a party in August 1960, the same month in which he assumed the associate defence portfolio, but added: "I will answer no questions on published statements by her."

He said his relationship with the woman was a social one. He had no reason to think the woman might have been "an agent of any sort."

Shopping List Grows Bigger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government's military shopping list for food, clothing and medical supplies is swelling by some $500,000,000 during the current Viet Nam war buildup, officials disclosed today.

The price tag for these items, directly related to the support and well-being of the individual serviceman, will total $1,800,000,000 for the 1966 fiscal year ending June 30, defence supply agency officials said.

This compares with up to $1,250,000,000 spent in the same category in fiscal 1965.

Overall, the agency is buying $4,000,000,000 this fiscal year for resale to the military, compared with $3,000,000,000 last year.

In case anyone was wondering, RCMP identified the two cylinders found at Abbott St. and Harvey Ave., at 8:30 a.m. today this week, as compressed soft drink containers and returned them to the company.

The cylinders, about three feet long and 10 inches wide, were found lying on the roadway at the intersection.

The warmer weather enjoyed by Kelownians recently has brought back all types of bugs, including the track and field one. One man, dressed in a red sweatshirt, was hard at it this morning doing his jogging exercises on Harvey Ave. Apparently the warmer wasn't entirely satisfying; he had his hood up and closed tightly.

The Kelowna Boys' Club was unsuccessful in its attempt to have Hees Cartright attend the annual Sport Show, April 14, 15, 16. TV star Dan Blocker's agent replied that none of the Bonanza players was able to attend.

The Kelowna Lions Club lost a member last week and the Kiwanis Club gained one. But the member the Kiwanis Club added was actually a Lion to begin with. And they didn't get him anyway because he left Kelowna before the whole thing began. It all began when Hank Crockett of the Royal Bank of Kelowna was transferred to a position in Montreal.

Before leaving he decided not to embarrass the Kelowna Lions by saying he was a member. As any good Lion would, he substituted the first name that came to mind, Kiwanis.

Des Junes comedians, the Canadian Players French-speaking company, due to perform in play, Leons D'Amour in Kelowna March 16, has played before 150,000 people in a 26-week tour across Canada. Group has given over 200 performances.

Rumors are circulating that Perry Mason may come to Kelowna for the B.C. Bar Association convention in June. The popular television personality is played by Raymond Burr of New Westminster.

Some people have been known to get excited after scoring a perfect 20 cribbage hand, but it's not often they send telegrams to tell of their good fortune. Well-known Kelowna resident John Ritchie held a dream hand during a game with Jack Serva at the Bakerton airport Thursday and wired the Courier office with the good news. He forgot to say who won the game.

The cadets are taught a basic knowledge of military life, including patriotism to their country and Queen. Through military liaison they get a certain amount of training, trying to develop leadership and comradeship.

The cadets operate under a three-phase program involving first, second and third year cadets. First year cadets receive the most rigorous training. Some of the basic requirements for these cadets are the

Break Fences Says Educator

There are many abnormalities or "fences" to be overcome or removed before learning in the 20th century can attain its fullest meaning.

Dr. A. R. MacKinnon told 150 people attending an education banquet Friday, the responsibility of breaking down the fences between society as a whole and the few in charge of education. He said he was glad to see during his two-day stay in Kelowna that this city is in the process of doing just that.

Dr. MacKinnon is dean of the department of education at Simon Fraser University, is a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, and has his doctor's degree from the University of Edinburgh.

He was in Kelowna in connection with Education Week and was guest speaker at a banquet sponsored by School District 23 and attended by education officials and city businessmen.

Dr. MacKinnon said one essential issue is the spread with which we are accepting as normal abnormalities, such as the slaughtering of our highways and the ease with which millions can be killed with an atom bomb.

Another issue is our slowness to accept inevitable change, such as the results of our population explosion, which we shrug off with a "we don't need to worry about it yet."

Dr. MacKinnon said there is an increase in efficiency in learning about learning and he drew a parallel of the efficiency with which prisoners of war were systematically "brain washed."

"We have in our power the possibility of making education an exceedingly efficient organization," he said.

"In increasing the efficiency of learning we no longer depend on the printed medium. Modern advances have brought us in touch with all parts of the world so that we can no longer be indifferent to what happens in other countries. So too, in learning, we no longer 'teach' in a vacuum and teach by coming in touch with situations."

Dr. MacKinnon said the distance between the source of information and the consumer of information must be reduced.

By keeping a child away from the language of school and the social environment of school, until Grade 1, we may be lengthening the distance between the source and the learner.

The pre-school period may be the most significant period of a child's life when the pattern is set that may make or break his ability to learn.

"Time is another important factor, time to decide what you are going to do with your life. We want prospective teachers to have time to decide if teaching is for them. We send them out to classrooms early so they can get close to the source of information and decide if this is what they want to do."

"Human learning is not an individual matter, learning has a social context. Teachers must take time to learn about their pupils as the pupils learn about the teacher, so they may and each other in learning and evaluation."

Education Week Success Review By City Officials

The general opinion of school officials in Kelowna is that Education Week was highly successful.

From Monday to Friday, public attention was focused on education through open houses at elementary schools, speakers at service clubs and special events staged by secondary school students.

The climax was a banquet Friday sponsored by School District 23 and attended by 150 people.

"It was education's shining hour," said Mrs. Dorothy Pelly, school board representative on the education week committee.

"For one week the school was the focal point of the community. It was a thrill to see people streaming into open houses at schools," Mrs. Pelly termed it "a tremendous success."

Dr. J. W. Teichroeb, chairman of education week, said the aim was to make people aware of the educational system and allow them to see what schools are doing for their children.

"The week was successful and I feel we had better cooperation this year from the community and from organizations."

"Open houses were well attended. People were excited and so were children in making preparations for open houses."

"Once aware of what education has to offer, it is up to the public to decide how they can improve themselves and their children," Mr. Teichroeb said.

GOOD WEEK: "It was a good week," W. L. B. Hawker, president of the Kelowna Teachers' Association said today.

"We succeeded in bringing people's attention to changes in education today and we hope they will continue to be concerned about education and will support it, ask questions and learn."

"Education is the business of experts but it should reflect the needs of society. We are concerned here with the needs of children and people should be concerned too."

"Attendance at open houses and at service club meetings was good," Mr. Hawker said.

As part of the observance of education week, the school board published 8,000 copies of a bulletin listing events.

Live Until You Die Theme For Next Week

National Health Week is an annual event designed for the promotion of health and the postponement of untimely death, and sponsored by the Health League of Canada. The theme this year is "live until you die."

The South Okanagan Union Board of Health says our business is health assistance in all forms, our slogan this year is "live until you die."

Life expectancy of the average Canadian today is perhaps 72 years, add an extra three years for women. Medicine has made big strides to extend the lifetime of all persons. Lifetime can be forever if you can live with all things accepted until you die.

The trick is to express our vitality at the particular speed which nature foresees for us. Mental stimulation is equally important in retaining vitality. Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old by deserting their ideals.

The human body was designed to be used. Much of the present day tiredness is possibly just simple rebellion against enforced idleness. Perhaps the answer to this is a sense of purpose and the opportunity to contribute to others, a reason for to "live until you die." A man's senior years are inevitably the sum total of what has gone before. They can be a time of continued growth in wisdom, experience and achievement.

In the process of growing old it is good business to have a physician as medical advisor and counsellor to guide you in living as well as in illness. This is excellent insurance to have when medical assistance is required.

The problems of aging are outmoded, fallacious without meaning. Today the term is "Opportunities of Aging" and finally the key to successful aging is successful living.

Remember, you are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt, as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fears, as young as your hope, as old as your despair. — L. A. N. Patterson, Chairman, South Okanagan Union Board of Health.

NATO Days are Numbered

(The Charlottetown Guardian)

Prime Minister Pearson is well versed in the intricate problems of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and it is reassuring to note the confidence he has expressed in the future of the alliance at this time. Yet all the signs point to the fact that the days of NATO, as presently constituted, are numbered. President de Gaulle has announced that after April 4 of 1969, all foreign troop elements in France will have to come under French command. This coincides with the date at which the 20-year North Atlantic Treaty can be renounced by its members.

De Gaulle has frequently indicated that France is determined to put an end to what he considers the subordination of his country to the will of the collective defense arrangement and more specifically the domination of NATO policy by the United States. The status of NATO headquarters near Paris and the Versailles headquarters of the allies' supreme command in Europe will be called into question. "It is the will of France," says de Gaulle, "to dispose of her own fate."

Help For the Battered Baby

(The Calgary Herald)

The Alberta government's new Child Welfare Act promises to be a most important and valuable piece of legislation.

In addition to easing religious restrictions in the placing of children for adoption, the proposed act also contains two other worthy provisions.

Under the new legislation, responsible single adults will be permitted to adopt children. Although such a provision will certainly not cause any mass response from Alberta's unmarried adults, there are some who will undoubtedly wish to take advantage of it.

Probably the majority of single persons are not in a position to adopt a child, no matter how much the opportunity may appeal to them. It would not be easy for a working adult to raise children, particularly those in their pre-school years. But there are others who are in a position to provide a proper environment for a child's upbringing and to give it the care and love which it needs.

The provincial government is also to be commended for the provision imposing severe penalties for child-beating. There have been too many cases recently of shocking mistreatment and abuse of helpless youngsters. Particularly disturbing is the probability that many such incidents never reach the attention of the police or the courts.

The problem has been one of detecting such crimes. A small child cannot be expected to go down to the police station and file a complaint against the sadistic adult who has beaten him black and blue. The government legislation takes the sensible approach of requiring physicians to report cases where they are convinced child-beating has occurred. More suspicion on the part of a doctor should be sufficient cause for informing the police; if he is called to attend a child suffering injuries consistent with those administered in a beating, he should be cautious about accepting the conventional parental excuse that the child fell downstairs or tumbled out of its crib.

Furthermore, the penalties announced by the government for such crimes are perfectly legitimate — a maximum fine of $1,000 or up to two years in prison. There should be no hesitation in imposing them when necessary.

WHERE SELDOM IS HEARD AN ENCOURAGING WORD

Quebec Newspapers View Events As They See Them

This is a selection of editorial comments on current topics, translated from the French-language press of Canada.

Quebec Le Soleil—The Union Nationale party leader, Mr. Daniel Johnson, is anxious about the fate of Canadian French-language newspapers.

In remarks before the legislative assembly last week, he spoke again of the creation of a French-language news agency. He expressed the idea three years ago and several groups took it up since then.

He went as far as to promise the establishment of such an agency six months after the Union Nationale took power.

The Union Nationale leader justified his enthusiasm for a French-language news agency by his desire to maintain the quality of the language, both written and spoken, at a high level. From an idealistic point of view, the Union Nationale leader is undoubtedly right.

It is evident, as Cultural Affairs Minister Pierre Laporte said following Mr. Johnson's remarks, that it would be desirable to establish a French-language news agency. However, attractive this project may be, it remains difficult, if not impossible, to achieve because of the limited financial means at the disposal of the French-language press of Canada which has only 13 dailies with a total circulation varying between 700,000 and 800,000.

The Union Nationale leader is the first to recognize the insufficiency of financial resources of the press of French Canada and he proposes to supplement them by means of government grants which might be extended to newspapers on the basis of their circulation to set up an authentic French service or improve the French service of The Canadian Press.

In all justice to the co-operative, which includes the majority of Canadian newspapers, the co-operation these newspapers have given in establishing a French service within CP and in improving it so it becomes less and less a translation service must be pointed out. . . . There can never be any question of French-language newspapers accepting any form whatsoever of financial assistance from the government. These newspapers are too aware of the dangers such a step would represent, of the impediments to their liberty and freedom of expression. Besides, there is no proof that the existence of a French-language news agency would mean such an improvement in the quality of French in our newspapers. It would be unjust to hold the newspapers alone responsible for the deficiencies in spoken or written French. One could take a searching look into the teaching of French and into the role of radio and television which exercise, not only in their newscasts, an influence on the speaking habits of our population. (March 7)

Trois-Rivières Le Nouvelliste—The French service of The Canadian Press was born from the desire of French-language newspapers, chiefly those in Quebec, to respect the thought of those who participate in the principal events of our French life and to do justice to the predominance of French in the province. It is in this same spirit that there is a tendency towards constant improvement.

All political figures should recognize that there has been a noticeable progress for several years, especially as regards coverage of the Quebec legislature. The creation of a strictly French-Canadian news agency would be excellent in principle but it would have to be self-sustaining and independent of the government to avoid the danger of managed news. However, we believe that the political figures of Quebec are not yet ready to give complete independence to a news service subsidized by the province. And the self-sustaining ability of a new agency which would effectively rival the services of the existing one is yet to be demonstrated. — Paul - Emile Plouffe (March 5)

Montreal Le Presse—There are a number of news agencies throughout the world which count on direct or indirect financial aid from the state to survive. No matter how good their intentions are or the quality of their staff is they are always more or less treated with caution by those in the newspaper business. Even in the best possible conditions of existence, a French-Canadian news agency which drew from the budget of the state could not defend itself from such suspicions or escape reproaches of this kind. Does that mean we must be satisfied with the present state of affairs? No. The French service of The Canadian Press has been improving for several years but too slowly in our opinion. It will not be possible to correct its weaknesses, due mostly to technical and financial causes until the members of this news co-operative decide as a group to pay the price of necessary reforms. But the problem will not be resolved by creating from nothing a very costly autonomous agency whose services in most cases would duplicate what has existed for about 12 years. Cyrille Felleau (March 5)

Ottawa Le Droit—We do not know more than Mr. Pearson and others whether it is true that American information services studied the consequences of an eventual separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada. If the report is accurate, it is neither sensational nor astonishing. Let us think it over. For five years there has been talk of the "quiet revolution" and separatist movements find this so-called revolution too quiet. Each week ministers of the Quebec government make statements that they want to be striking, thus maintaining a kind of encouraging agitation. From the point of view of the United States, it is not natural to consider "la belle province" as a "turbulent area" in the same way as certain African and Asiatic countries to which the separatists freely compare Quebec? . . . We maintain, fortunately, diplomatic relations with the U.S. and it is certain that the American ambassador informs Washington of what is happening in Canada. Why not want to round out this information by an on-the-spot investigation? . . . Finally, when you choose to speak of "revolution," quiet or noisy, you must accept the consequences. — Willie Chevalier, (March 3)

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Many A Slip With 'The Ring'

By DR. JOSEPH G. MOLNER

Dear Dr. Molner:

I have been reading about the new IUCD's (intra-uterine contraceptive devices). Are they in general use by physicians or must I go to a special clinic to obtain them?

I have been taking the pills for two years but they seem to make me tired and nervous. The IUCD's sound ideal.—MRS. C.D. There is no perfect method of contraception except sexual abstinence, so the best advice I can offer is to choose the one that has the fewest disadvantages for you.

The present IUCD's are updated models of devices that have been used for many centuries. Today's models may be thin steel rings, plastic spirals or circles of nylon thread.

There seems to be no agreement as to precisely why they prevent conception, but they do, even though not 100 per cent of the time.

From such reports as I have encountered, my feeling is that disadvantages outnumber advantages, but others may disagree with me.

Advantages are: No personal effort is required, no need to remember to take a pill for 20 days on schedule. There are no systemic effects such as headaches, nausea or bloating.

For the other side of the picture, the devices do not always stay in place. The expulsion rate (falling out of position) is reported as high as 20 per cent (that is, occurring with one of five users). There is a similar percentage of removal because of bleeding which, naturally, risks infection. There may be pelvic discomfort.

It is necessary for the woman to make fairly frequent visits to the doctor to make sure the device is in proper position. When pregnancy occurs with the device, there is a high incidence of tubal pregnancies.

Because the devices are irritating to some individuals, one might suspect that there is a risk of cancer. However, this apparently is NOT the case, which is important to know.

It is not necessary to go to special clinics for these devices. There are many doctors who consider them an effective contraceptive. I think there are more, however, who think the disadvantages outweigh the advantages.

LOOKING BACK WITH OLD STAGER

Glanders Attack Plagued Valley

By ART GRAY

In the latter part of 1965 and early months of 1966 the ranchers and stockmen, and owners of heavy horses, suffered heavy losses from the scourge of glanders that spread through the Valley. Many fine and valuable animals were led to slaughter in the government's efforts to stamp out the disease.

Central figures in this drama were Dr. W. H. Gaddes, veterinarian, who had come into the Valley the year before and Dr. Simon Fraser Tolmie, Dominion Veterinary Inspector for British Columbia.

The latter will be best remembered by most, however, as the premier of British Columbia during the depth of the depression. Apart from his ill-fated term of office as premier, Dr. Tolmie was a man of two pioneer families, linked with the early history of the fur trading days.

His father was William Fraser Tolmie, a Scottish naturalist, who came to the Hudson's Bay post of Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River and married David Douglas of Douglas for true fame.

FUR TRADER

His mother too, was linked with the early days for she was the daughter of John Wors, a fur trading associate of Peter Sarsse Ogden, John McLaughlin and James Douglas, and an indefatigable diarist, whose "Journals" provided detailed records of happenings in the early days. Through his mother, Dr. S. F. Tolmie was also connected with the even earlier inhabitants, the Indians, who held sway before the white man came. John Wors had married an Indian woman though somewhat tentatively, for the marriage was performed by Rev. Robert John Staines less than two weeks before their daughter married William Fraser Tolmie.

Unlike his father, the younger Tolmie took an interest in animal husbandry rather than plant life.

First reference to the prevalence of the disease appeared in the Oct. 3, 1965 issue of the old Courier, which read: "Seventeen cases of glanders in horses in Peachland have been reported. The animals have all been destroyed."

The Courier of Jan. 11, 1966 reports that "A mournful procession was to be seen winding its way to Knox Mountain when 14 of Kelowna's equine stock headed for slaughter, having reacted to the Malignin test for glanders. The principal owners were Messrs. Collett Bros., four, and Mr. Cal Blackwood six."

A week later the Courier reports "Nine horses were condemned on account of glanders. Mr. Blackwood lost three, Collett Bros. three and Silling, Heltman and H. Gordon one each." The February issues continued to report casualties.

MERCILESS REGULARITY

"The extermination of glanders horses proceeds with merciless regularity. A large number were condemned last week amongst them being Dr. Boyce's valuable stallion. Out of 27 head Mr. John Casorso had 12 shot and 11 picked out for a second test. It seems that glanders has existed amongst his stock in pronounced form but he was unfamiliar with the symptoms. A hideous contagious only to the horse, mule and man, and affected the lungs, mucous membrane and lymphatic system."

I thought the order in which they had listed man not too complimentary. It also stated, "cases of infection are almost always fatal."

Malignin test used by the veterinary inspectors often showed that horses, apparently in the best of health, were infected and were carriers of the disease and these apparently healthy horses were led off to slaughter with the obviously sick ones.

A March issue refers to "the fine station of the KLO Co. has joined the procession to the logpile. It took two men to lead him to execution he was so full of vigor, and it seems hard that so splendid an animal should be condemned."

As a result of the criticism a public meeting to consider the glanders question was held in Raymer's Hall, attended by 90 persons, mostly from the country. S. F. Tolmie was voted to the chair, and Mayor Raymer secretary. From the first the meeting was disorderly with many speaking at one time, refusing to obey the chair. Dr. Boyce favored stamping out the disease at once. E. M. Carruthers advocated a quarantine, and also advocated a suspension of the Malignin test. Several declared they did not believe in the Malignin test, and Isaac MacVannoy Jr. introduced a resolution, previously passed in Vancouver, declaring the test unsatisfactory and demanding discontinuance.

An unpleasant incident occurred when John Durnith stated farmers could manage their own business without the interference of others, which resulted in Mayor Raymer leaving the platform. There were many other occurrences that marred the meeting. Some denounced the whole thing as graft, with the minister, veterinary-general and all concerned making money out of it. Subsequent meetings took a more level-headed course, and in April Dr. Tolmie paid a visit to the district and met a representative committee. Messrs. Cameron, Ringer, Moss, Elliott, Carruthers and Dr. Boyce at the home of Dr. Gaddes. He pointed out that nearly all the horses tested were suspects, the majority from heavy horses and in close contact with diseased animals.

The Courier of May 31, 1966 carried a report from Viriden, Manitoba, of human deaths from glanders, the publication of which probably caused many opponents of the efforts of veterinarians, to take a different view.

The story told of Fred Hall, a farmer near Viriden, dying of human glanders, caught from his own infected animals, which he had been treating for "distemper."

Later a veterinary had found it was glanders, and the animals were destroyed. Unfortunately the man died, and his wife and a neighbor who had been attending him fell ill.

The report concluded: "It is feared that they will develop the awful disease. No person has been allowed to enter the house, except those necessary to remove the corpse. The building will be burned. The case is a most distressing one."

Just to satisfy my own curiosity I looked up Glanders in the Encyclopedia Britannica. I found, amongst a mass of other information, the disease has been known since before the Christian era. It was "contagious only to the horse, mule and man, and affected the lungs, mucous membrane and lymphatic system."

I thought the order in which they had listed man not too complimentary. It also stated, "cases of infection are almost always fatal."

CANADA'S STORY

Opportunity Missed For Better Relations

By BOB BOWMAN

The taking over of the Jesuit estates by the government of Lower Canada on March 12, 1800, provided an opportunity to bring about better understanding between French and English-speaking Canadians. The Pope had dissolved the order in 1763 when Britain got Canada from France, but nothing was done about the land owned by the Jesuits until the last of them died in 1800. Then it was decided that their lands should be turned over to the government of Lower Canada and the income used for educational purposes.

About the time the new Lower Canada legislature opened in 1792 refugees from the French revolution began arriving in Canada. They included 30 priests who circulated in Lower Canada and described the horrors of the new regime. One of the French-speaking Canadian suggested that the language of the legislature should be English because "we live under the best of kings." However it was agreed that either French or English would be acceptable.

When it was suggested that English was the "loyal" language, Charlier de Lotbiniere said: "Remember the year 1775! Those Canadians who spoke nothing but French showed their attachment to the sovereign. They helped to defend this province. You saw them join with the faithful subjects of His Majesty and repel attacks on this city by people who spoke very good English. It is not, you see, uniformly of language that makes people more faithful or more united."

Neither did French-speaking Canadians want any part of Napoleon's plans to recapture Canada for France. After Nelson's victory on the Nile, there was a service of Thanksgiving at Quebec, and Bishop Plessier said: "Alas, where should we be, brethren, if this country by an unfortunate reverse should return to its former masters?"

The trend toward better understanding was reversed after March 12, 1800. The English-speaking minority in Montreal and Quebec insisted that the revenue from the Jesuit estates be used to establish Protestant schools in every parish so French-speaking children would gradually become Protestants. A bill to this effect passed the legislature but was so watered down that it was not effective, and was dropped. Unfortunately, old resentments, which had been dying away, were renewed.

Open House At Schools Marks Education Week In Westbank

Education Week was marked Wednesday, March 9, at George Pringle Secondary High School by presentation of several musical numbers by the school band.

This band, little more than a year old, is under the direction of music instructor Douglas Oke. Zubick said in welcoming parents and friends to 'open house', the pride and joy of students, staff and parents alike. Local organizations have assisted the band by contributions of instruments and in other ways, and later this season friends will enjoy a spring concert to be presented by the entire band membership.

During his remarks Mr. Zubick told the gathering something of the new school program now in effect, and spoke also of the complexities in the field of education today. He closed by inviting parents to talk with teachers over coffee, served by the future teachers organization following the close of the musical program.

Later, parents and friends visited the various rooms and inspected the projects undertaken by the pupils. Of special interest was the industrial arts building, where instructor C. W. Ouehand and his pupils were keen to demonstrate the work done in the fields of electricity, metal and woodwork, and gladly answered the many questions put to them.

Sculptor Of Silver Jewelry Deserts Former Art Forms

MONTREAL (CP) — Paris fashion designer Pierre Cardin was responsible for Frida Blumberg's desertion of her original art forms for the sculpturing of contemporary silver jewelry.

"I sold a ring and a necklace to the wife of a photographer who was photographing Cardin's fashion collection in Paris," said the Swedish girl, who spent her childhood in South Africa.

"When Mr. Cardin saw her wearing my jewelry, he was enthusiastic about my work and suggested I exhibit in Paris. From that moment, I began taking my jewelry designing seriously and in time completed a 50-piece collection."

Miss Blumberg, 30, who attended the School of Arts and Crafts in Johannesburg and ran her own art studio there for eight years, said she originally turned to designing jewelry as a relaxation after the exhausting job of designing and executing a 1,500-square-foot mural for the Durban ocean terminal in 1961.

"I was given only a little over three months to complete the mural and I had worked 16 hours a day without any days off. Every tessera (the small pieces used in mosaic work) had

"I chose to come to Montreal because I was feeling a little confined in London and going to a young country appealed to me strongly."

Frida's jewelry is light in weight because "most women prefer lightweight jewelry." The silver she uses comes in sheet form.

"I hammer and beat every piece into shape. It's light as compared with the weight it would have if it were cast. It's hollow."

The designer, who still does some painting and etching, said she had often been asked why she didn't use gold as well as silver for her jewelry.

"I don't think my present designs are for gold," she answers. "Eventually I may use gold in ways that would be compatible to be individually laid."

Frida never did exhibit in Paris because "there was too much red tape to go through." But she put on an exhibition in London instead. She had been a pupil of the Central School of Arts there and was later asked to institute a diploma course in jewelry at the school.

Her work has since been displayed in Washington and Munich. She has been in Montreal since last August.

Northcott Wins Brier Advances To Scotch Cup

HALIFAX (CP) — Calgary's enticed Alberta entry are third Tankard from David M. foot to the eight-foot and wicked behind a pair of guards at the front of the house.

Northcott put himself into an early hole in the playoff matches. With this difficult shot facing him, Gurovka elected to draw the ball with an unorthodox but wide and heavy, his rock rolled through the house leaving Northcott with the crucial single.

"Just because we won the Brier is no reason to let down," said Northcott after the win. "We want to win it all."

But he added, "The Scotch Cup has to be an anti-climax. You really have to worry about only two things: beating you for the world title. But we want to win it all."

Gurovka, who won the Ontario title at Brampton with a last-rock draw, said:

"We knew before the match that we had to play it. But we ended with Gurovka losing. We played well, but Northcott's draw was a single at the back of the 12-foot."

SETS HARD SHOT

That set the stage for the 12th we'd have to play it. But we ended with Gurovka losing. We played well, but Northcott's draw was a single at the back of the 12-foot."

Detroit, Chicago Try To Share Winless Streaks In NHL Weekend

By GARY MCCARTHY

Edmonton's Ron Stewart will be trying for his 30th career goal in the National Hockey League when the Bruins face Stewart's former team, the Toronto Maple Leafs, in Toronto tonight.

Stewart said he actually scored the 30th goal Wednesday night by netting in a shot by goalie Georges Marotte as the Bruins beat Montreal Canadiens 5-1.

But Stewart did not claim the goal even though Montreal goalie Lorne Warley confirmed the deflection. The goal was credited to Marotte.

If the last-place Bruins play as well in Toronto as they did in Montreal Wednesday, the Leafs could be in trouble.

But the Bruins could have a rough night themselves against substitute netminder Bruce Gamble, who registered his third shutout in five games in Toronto's 1-0 win over Detroit Wednesday night.

Assistant coach of the Central League is called in his five outings—winning four and losing one.

Gamble poses a problem for Leafs' manager, coach Punch Imlach, who must decide which of his three goalies he'll send back to the minors after the Sunday midnight deadline. No minor league can be called up after then.

The Bruins' goalless streak last three games, will have broken last night's Toronto victory. Haul looking for his record-breaking 51st goal against the Rangers.

Hall, who shares the record of 50 goals in a season with former Montreal star Maurice Richard and Bernie Gendron, is the only player in NHL history to equal the mark twice. He scored 50 goals in 1961-62.

The Canadiens will be without centre Henri Richard and defenseman Jean-Guy Talbot when they face the Red Wings and their veteran left winger, Dick Duff, is a doubtful starter. He didn't practice Friday because of a bout with the flu.

WINLESS IN SEVEN

Although Detroit has been winless in its last seven games, managing a tie at New York last Sunday, coach and general manager Alvin Pate said it may lead the team tonight. The Wings have won only three and tied five in 20 games.

Pate hopes they can get started again in time to hit peak form for the playoffs.

Totems Edge Old Nemesis Portland Buckaroos At Home

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks and Seattle Totems both scored narrow Western Hockey League victories Friday night.

Canucks came from behind with three goals in the final period to top the Seals 4-3 in San Francisco, while the Totems scored in overtime to down Portland 3-2 in Seattle.

The Vancouver-San Francisco game was a heart-topper. The Seals built up a steady lead going into the final period before Canucks caught fire.

Two of Canucks' three last-period goals came within the last 95 seconds. Howie Hughes got two Vancouver goals and Billy McNeill and Larry Caban singles.

Phil Maloney set up all three Vancouver goals in the last period.

The game was filled with fights. A free-for-all resulted in 42 minutes in penalties, including two misconducts and four majors.

In Seattle, Don Chiz's goal at 7:11 of the overtime period gave Totems their first win over Portland since Dec. 19, 1961.

EXHIBITION BASEBALL RESULTS

Robin Roberts, 39, is seeking another year on the job, and he triggered his campaign Friday with a near-perfect performance in Cocoa, Fla.

The Houston pitcher-coach allowed only an infield single to Danny Cater in three innings as the Astros blanked Chicago White Sox 2-0 for their second straight exhibition victory.

Traded during the season by Baltimore Orioles, Roberts finished last season with a 5-2 record for Houston and 10-9 overall. He also compiled a 2.78 earned-run average with both teams, a mark he bettered only twice in his previous 17 seasons.

Roberts pitched the first three innings Friday. Larry Dierker and Danny Coombs completed the debut. Joe Morgan's single and Doug Rader's triple drove in the Astros' only run.

POST 5-0 TRIUMPH

Four Baltimore pitchers combined for a one-hit, 5-0 triumph over Minnesota Twins. Steve Barber, Moe Drabowsky and Dick Hall held the Twins hitless through eight innings, but Bernie Allen led off the ninth with a single off Don Larsen. Brooks Robinson hit a two-run homer in the first.

Veteran Vernon Law and Reggie Wastie, each pitched three complete innings in Pittsburgh's 5-2 win over Boston Red Sox. Law also singled across a run in the second inning.

A two-run homer by Leo Cardenas snapped a tie and carried Cincinnati Reds past Philadelphia Phillies 4-2. Deron Johnson also homered for the Reds.

In Mexico City, Cleveland Indians bombed the Mexican League 8-1 behind the home runs of Leon Wagner and Chico Salazar.

Another White Sox team defeated Kansas City 5-1 as the Athletics made four errors.

Rossland Evens Semi-Finals: Kimberley Takes Game Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rossland Warriors surprised everyone—most of all themselves—Friday night when they scored back from a three-goal deficit to outpace league-leading Spokane Jets 5-4 in a game played at Trail.

The win evens their Western

International Hockey League semi-final series with Jets at a game apiece. The two squads meet again tonight at central Grand Forks for the third game in the best-of-seven series.

In other WHL semi-final action, Kimberley Dynamiters blanked Nelson Maple Leafs 6-2 to take a one-game lead in that series in a contest played at Kimberley.

Rossland squeaked into the WHL playoffs, a single point ahead of Trail Smoke Eaters, on the strength of a game tie against Cranbrook Royals last week. They beat Cranbrook 6-5, then took an 8-5 loss in the first game of the series at Spokane.

The end of the first period in Friday's game saw Rossland lead by three goals. The two squads blanked the second then Rossland charged back with three unanswered tallies in the third to tie it up.

The game went into overtime and Rossland got the clincher in sudden death after an extra 10-minute period saw both clubs get singles.

Rossland singles went to Alex Reid, Ernie Sever, Billy Martin, Hal Jones and Ed Watt. Jim Chow led Spokane with two goals and Jets got singles from Tom Hughes and Gordon Trolak.

Dick Vincent led Kimberley to victory with a two-goal performance to give Dynamiters a series lead of two games to one. Walt Pearce, Wally Souter, Wayne King and Ken McTeer got a goal each for the winners.

Both Nelson goals came in the second period. Murray Owen and Leroy Mowery picking up the points.

Kimberley gets another crack at Maple Leafs on Dynamiter ice tonight.

Victoria Final Looms In School Hoop Tourney

VANCOUVER (CP) — Oak Bay and Victoria High turned in solid performances Friday to turn the B.C. High School boys basketball tournament into an all-Victoria final.

The Vancouver Island teams will meet tonight in the championship round.

Oak Bay, defending champions, defeated North Vancouver 43-25 while Victoria downed Vancouver College 42-33 in evening games before a screaming crowd of some 4,500.

Victoria won the Victoria city championship by a three-point margin over Oak Bay, but Oak Bay came back to take the Vancouver Island title two weeks ago to the same margin.

Last year Oak Bay defeated Alton 48-3 in the championship final.

Centre Brian MacKenzie again was Oak Bay's scoring strength, picking up 20 points against North Vancouver.

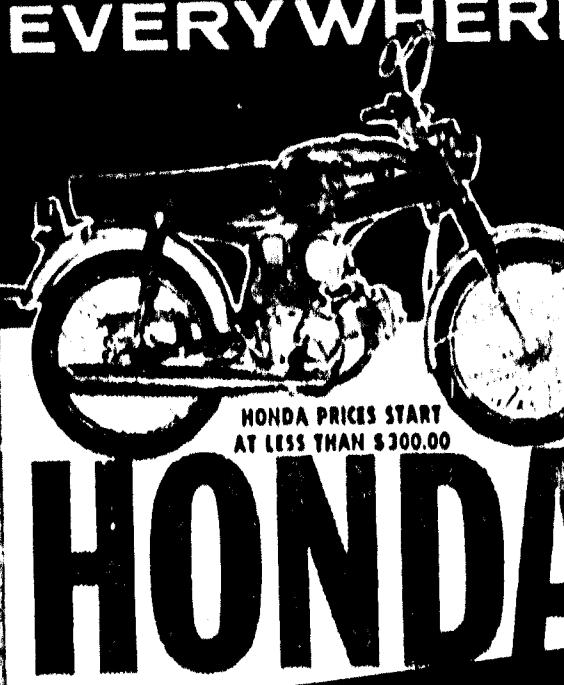

Orthie Madelon marked Victoria, scoring 18 points most of them on close-in shots with either hand. He got help from guard Drew Schneider, who also picked up nine points against Vancouver College.

In the consolation round, four teams advanced to the semi-finals. West Vancouver defeated Prince George 38-22, Alton defeated Vancouver Lord Dying 34-32, Burnaby Central downed Kamloops 15-10 and Windermere edged Prince Rupert 42-36.

Russians, Czechs To Meet In Final

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (CP) — Russia and Czechoslovakia will meet in the final of the world hockey title by beating their most important rivals Friday.

Russia beat Canada 3-0 and Czechoslovakia edged Sweden 2-1.

The Russians and Czechs clash Sunday in a game that will decide the championship, held by Russia since 1963, and second place.

The Czechs, with six straight victories, now have a one-point lead over the Russians, who have won five games and tied Sweden 3-3 in the eight-team round-robin tournament.

Canada and Sweden meet Sunday in a game that will decide third and fourth places. Canada needs only a tie to hang on to third place because it has won four of its six games. Sweden, upset 4-1 by East Germany in addition to losing to Czechoslovakia, has three wins and a tie.

The Czechs need only hold the Russians to a tie to dethrone them.

The Canadians were far less disappointed after their loss to Russia Friday than they had been after losing 2-1 to Czechoslovakia Thursday. The players accepted defeat as the fair result of a good game and Rev. David Bauer, team organizer and consultant, said the Russians are "a great hockey team."

The Russians hit the score sheet when their main line checked at 15:20 of the first period. Vladimir Aleksandrov, the leading scorer of the tournament, took a pass from Aleksander Almetov and rammed home the goal. It was Aleksandrov's ninth goal of the tournament.

The Russians beat Canada's brilliant goalie, Seth Martin of Trail, B.C., twice in the third period. Vladimir Vikulov made it 2-0 early in the period. Five minutes later defenseman Oleg Zacher drove home a slap shot from the point, on which Martin was screened.

Father Bauer and playing coach Jackie McLeod said the Canadians might have done better, had key players not used up so much energy in killing off penalties during the Czech game the day before.

But Father Bauer said: "I don't want to take anything away from the performance of this great Russian team. They deserved to win."

The Canadians had been embittered after Thursday's loss to the Czechs by what they considered the work of incompetent referees. Their judgment of the officiating was shared by the Russian and Swedish coaches, who saw the game, and many of the European sports writers who covered it.

Scripture—Luke 10:25-37; Ephesians 4:25-32; James 2:1-7; 1 Peter 4:7-11.

Like the Good Samaritan, a Christian's love of God is reflected in his compassion and unprejudiced love for his fellowmen—Luke 10:25-37.

Unless the Christian's relationship with others is characterized by honesty, purity, kindness and love, his faith is vain—Ephesians 4:25-32.

True Christians accept all men as equals in God's sight, offering the kindness, love and understanding they want for themselves—James 2:1-7.

True love of God cannot exist unless we truly love our fellowmen at the same time.—1 Peter 4:7-11.

Herod Built Mountain Palace As He Was In Fear Of Attack

MASADA, Israel (CP)—When, on the eve of their defeat, Herod the Great decided to build a mountain-top palace rather than be captured, Masada was left in ruins.

Today, after two winters of archaeological excavation, a reconstruction by experts and several thousand volunteers from 25 countries, Masada has been mostly restored.

In April it will be opened to the general public and by summer it will be swarming with tourists and Israelis.

Masada is impressive even if only as one of the few archaeological sites in Israel that has been completely excavated. Herod's buildings and walls, his three-level palace at the mountain's northern rim and his storerooms have been uncovered.

The ritual baths and synagogue built by the zealous are the only ones thus far dating back to the time of the Second Temple, rebuilt by Herod but destroyed in 70 AD when Titus captured Jerusalem.

The setting is awesome. The Dead Sea and the earth's lowest stretch of land, a rocky, treeless desert 1,366 feet below sea level, lie on one side, a bump of barren mountains on the other.

But in modern-day Israel, Masada has a special significance. As Prof. Yigael Yadin of the Hebrew University, director of the excavation, says in the preface to a booklet:

"In many eyes Masada was and is first and foremost a symbol. It signifies the stand of the few against the many, the last fight of those who gave their life for political, religious and spiritual freedom and chose death rather than slavery and submission."

It is at Masada that recruits to the Israeli armored corps are sworn in. And it has become a traditional place of pilgrimage on Hanukkah, the festival of light, which usually falls in December.

The first time I climbed Masada was in the summer of 1961 at 4 a.m. on a day when the temperature was to rise to 114 above. A group of 24 of us made the 35-minute hike up a 900-foot serpentine path on the east face, puffing as we reached the top just in time to see the sun come up over the mountains of Jordan across the Dead Sea.

The ruins were much as they had been when they were rediscovered in the 19th century. We could see where Herod's palace had been but it was impossible to reach the lower two terraces.

Today there's a much easier route to the top, thanks to the siege hill built by Roman slaves and the addition of steps carved out by the archaeological expedition of the last two years.

Our latest climb was early in February on an overcast day in topcoat weather, a relatively easy 15-minute ascent up the west face after a bounding half-hour ride in a Land Rover from the nearby town of Raet.

A system of stairways now takes you down to the lower terraces of the palace and guides are on hand to conduct you on a two-hour tour of the mountain-top.

Relics of the past, including 4,000 coins and fragments of scrolls, have been removed, but probably there are other finds to be made, perhaps even some signs of the bones of the 960 zealots. For, as visitors are told:

"The whole mountain is covered with remains of historical value. Please leave them exactly as they are. Don't collect souvenirs."

Australian Drink Problem Not Seen As Joke By Group

MELBOURNE (CP)—Australians like to boast they are the world's hardest, toughest and most prolific drinkers. There is a certain pride in one's capacity to take liquor and hold it.

One of the first questions a newcomer to Australia is asked is "What do you think of the beer?" He had better say it is good or he is an outcast.

Australians brag about the quality and quantity of their beer even more than they do about their fast racetracks and superb swimming and surfing beaches.

"Getting on the grog" has become something of a national joke. But 250 leading Australians who have just finished a meeting in Melbourne don't think it is a joke at all.

They have been holding a 10-day summer school on alcoholism, the first of its kind in Australia.

They were doctors, social workers, university professors, clergymen, business leaders, trade union officials, policemen, and lawyers. Most of them like a drink themselves. On one particularly hot day during the school, an order was sent out for 10 dozen bottles of beer. The delegates felt thirsty.

The organizer and director of the school was 55-year-old Dr. James G. Rankin, on the staff of Melbourne University's department of medicine, who opened the discussion with the challenging statement that "Australian society is said to be running on alcohol."

There are known to be 150,000 alcoholics in Australia. But there must be many more unknown alcoholics. One of the great problems, said Dr. Rankin, was to bring alcoholism out into the open and to get it officially recognized as a disease.

There was a stigma in having "alcoholic" put on a medical certificate. So doctors disguised it and wrote in instead some more "respectable" illness. This just hid the problem.

The average Australian wage earner spends $240 Australian—that's about $220 Canadian—a year on liquor. This is 38 per cent of his personal spending, compared with only 5.3 per cent on medical needs.

Based on a study of a Canadian alcoholic survey, it is estimated that four per cent of business executives in Australia are alcoholics and 1,500,000 men are lost in industry every year.

DENY PROBLEM

"Many employers deny the existence of an alcoholic problem in industry," Dr. Rankin said. "But if they looked deeply, as they have done in Canada, they would find there is indeed a problem."

One professor who has done a wide social survey said that alcoholism was most common among the French and Irish and their descendants in the U.S. and Australia. It was rarer among Jews, Greeks and Italians.

There were many criticisms of the narrow attitude of the courts in Australia, which, almost habitually, send to jail anyone persistently convicted of being drunk.

One of Australia's most senior judges said: "The jailing of these men is unjust and futile. People know alcoholism is a sickness, yet the courts treat the alcoholic as a criminal."

Some of the consequences of the summer school were as dramatic as the statements made by the delegates themselves.

The Victorian state government promised to appoint a magistrate to investigate and recommend on a new system for handling the habitual drunk who appears in court.

The minister for education promised to have alcoholism studied in the schools and the health minister said he would consider declaring alcoholism a medical disability and thus qualify sufferers for state health and social service benefits.

Lectures Dull Says Students

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Twenty-five Harvard medical students say lectures are dull and a waste of time. So they're being excused from class—and told to study on their own.

"The lecture system just doesn't work out," says Andrew Weil, 23, of Philadelphia, second-year student at the Harvard medical school.

"The psychological effect of sitting in a class and being lectured and 'labeled' at is to make you passive, dull, lose motivation and curiosity."

Well, a leader of the student group that successfully petitioned Dean Robert H. Ebert to be excused from classes for the rest of the year, said medical schools are throwing too many organized laboratory sessions and too many lectures at their medical students.

"BOOKS ARE QUICKER"

He said "most of the time the lectures are giving information that can be found in books, and found much quicker."

The 25 are part of a 106-member class studying pathophysiology, a combined approach to disease and their effects on the body.

They will be divided into groups of five to devise their own learning techniques with the help of volunteer faculty advisers.

They will take the same examinations as their 81 classmates and will attend the lectures that interest them.

Ebert said Harvard has no intention of abandoning the lecture system.

WHICH WAY?

All scripture is given by inspiration of God, to instruct his followers in the ways of righteousness. So very many religious beliefs and practices today are non-scriptural, they just do not exist in the Bible. It's a broad way that leads to destruction. . . . Anyone desiring information on any bible subject, please feel free to write. There is no cost or obligation. We should be pleased also to hear from anyone interested in joining a study of God's sacred word, that they may discover for themselves the true plan and purpose of God.

Christianity 'Threatened'

TORONTO (CP)—Christianity is threatened by the world's population explosion, says a joint statement by the Anglican and United Churches of Canada.

The document, prepared by Rev. R. C. Chalmers of Pine Hill Divinity Hall Halifax, and a committee from both churches says:

"Unless there is a revolution in the church in her belief in the Christian mission the population explosion will continue to outdistance the increase in the number of Christians in the world."

It adds that churches are reacting in a feeble manner to the many challenges confronting it.

The document was written chiefly as a study guide on the recommended principles of union between the two churches.

Irrigation System Copes 'With Even Top Demand'

LAKEVIEW HEIGHTS—Fred Dickson was elected and Malcolm Greenwood re-elected to the board of trustees at the annual general meeting of the Lakeview Irrigation District held in the institute hall.

Mr. Greenwood presided over the meeting in the absence of the chairman Lyman Dooley.

Peachland Council Requests School Titles Clarification

PEACHLAND—A letter received in December from the School District 23 was again discussed by Peachland Council. This letter stated that as most of the land that the district's schools are built upon have been turned over to the school board, the or are in the process of being turned over, that Peachland Council make the same arrangements and turn titles of designated school property over to the board.

After some debate the following motion was passed: That a letter be sent to School District 23 requesting they specify in detail exactly which portions of land are required to be designated as school property and handed over to the Board.

Councillor Clements reported on work being done on Princeton Ave. stating this is proceeding according to plan. The plans of the Government survey are expected to be received very soon.

Road signs on Princeton Ave. as requested by J. T. Garraway were discussed, and the municipality will post signs 'Caution Trucks Turning' on each side of the Troutman and Garraway intersection.

Fathers-And-Sons Banquet Held By Rutland Scouters

RUTLAND—The first Rutland Boy Scout Troop, and the first and second Rutland Wolf Cub Packs, together with their leaders, the fathers of the Scouts and Cubs, and a number of district officials, sat down to the annual father and son banquet, in the Rutland high school Monday.

Rutland Lions Club, sponsoring body of the local scout and cubs, had charge of arrangements, and William Newman, chairman of the group committee, presided. A group of mothers, headed by Mrs. Earl Humphrey, prepared supper.

HEAD TABLE
Head table guests included William Cleaver, president of the Central Okanagan District Council, assistant district commissioner (Scouts), Bert Mitchell; assistant district commissioner (Cubs), Harold Willett; and Rutland leaders, Scoutmaster Howard Johnson, assistant Scoutmaster Bert Chester, Cubmaster Ian Schierbeck (first pack), and Clarence Kellerman (second pack) and assistant Cubmasters Herb Street, Bernard Bartier and Mrs. Kellerman; Mrs. Humphrey, and Art Gray, a former Scoutmaster. Patrol Leader Bobbie Schneider said grace. A toast to the fathers was proposed by Patrol Leader Bernie Penner, and responded to briefly by Jack Morrison.

NEW TROPHY
An interesting event was the presentation, by Mr. Mitchell, of the new trophy for the best Scout window display during Boy Scout Week. This was won by the Rutland troop for their display in the window of the Rutland Variety Store, and was received by Scoutmaster Johnson on behalf of the troop.

Mr. Mitchell spoke of the forthcoming All-Canada Jamboree to be held at Penticton this summer, with a probable 3,000 Scouts and leaders attending. He also presented the laundryman and markman proficiency badges to Patrol Leader Raymond Stewart, and the artist and the markman

Oyama Club Names Officers

OYAMA—The directors of the Community Club unanimously re-elected Mrs. B. Gatzke president at their monthly meeting in the Memorial Hall March 2. Harley Smith went in as vice-president, David Fraham is treasurer and Mrs. F. Pensegrau secretary.

Gus Reich is in charge of advertising and Mrs. O. Gren and Lloyd Haber are on the entertainment committee. Mrs. M. F. Dewar is looking after recreation, with Mrs. C. Potchecary in charge of a newly-formed committee for hall maintenance.

U.C. Women and ladies of the congregation gathered at Mrs. R. Main's to bid farewell to a valued member, Mrs. B. Crozman.

A lively contest, originated by Mrs. N. Allingham, saw Mrs. Crozman come out the winner. The gift was a colored picture of Kalamalka Lake.

At the close of the pleasant evening Mrs. N. Allingham, Mrs. O. Hembling, and Mrs. R. Main served coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Crozman and children moved to Hope on the weekend.

PEACHLAND COUNCIL NOTES

PEACHLAND—Dr. A. Wells was appointed by council as Peachland representative on the Okanagan Regional Library Board in the place of Mrs. H. Thwait.

V. Gels has been appointed custodian for the municipal building commencing March 15.

J. Mosley of Summerland was appointed official assessor for the municipality of Peachland as of March 1.

Recreation Commission's bill from Troutman and Garraway Sawmills will be paid. Councillor Beet and Sidbotham both spoke on including a reasonable donation in this year's budget for the Peachland Recreation Commission to this sort of thing won't be happening in the future.

Councillor Clements will be paid an additional $100 in 1966 to cover the extra amount of travel required to supervise the extensive work being carried out on Municipal roads.

The council's annual donation of $25 will be given as usual to the Red Cross.

The matter of the employment of G. Smith by the water department was discussed. Mr. Smith who is the only person who has knowledge of all valve and outlets on the water system has suggested that he should have a stand-in in case of illness. There are blue prints in the municipal office, but these have not been found to be accurate, he said. Reeve Thwait and Councillor Beet were instructed to meet with Mr. Smith and discuss a possible contract and arrange some solution to the blue print problem, and report back to council.

WATER SHORTAGE
C. W. Pearson, district manager presented his report covering maintenance and repairs to the diversion system, storage of water in the dam, now at full capacity for the start of the new season. Algae growth presented little problem until late in the summer when it became more than normally resistant to treatment. Copper sulphate was found to be the most practical agent to deal with this. It was pointed out that in frequent coliform bacteria tests made by the South Okanagan Health Unit of water from Rose Valley dam, which provides the water for this district, there has not been a positive test in the last seven years, probably a record anywhere in the Okanagan.

SUBDIVISIONS
Mr. Pearson had prepared an interesting map showing subdivisions which were appearing all over the area, and also on display were some aerial photographs taken of the district as it was in 1949.

Felix Menu, chairman of the Centennial committee described the Centennial project, an addition to the existing W. I. hall, and the need for a canvass in the near future to raise the necessary $12,000.

Rutland AOTS Hear Address On New Zealand

RUTLAND—The regular monthly supper meeting of the Rutland AOTS Club was held Tuesday in the United Church hall, with a good attendance of members. Following supper served by the ladies of the United Church Women, there was a short business meeting, presided by the speaker, the evening, a New Zealander, Brian MacDonald of Tauranga, in the North Island, was introduced by vice-president Gerald Geen.

The speaker's talk was illustrated with a number of colored slides, showing scenes in all parts of that country.

A lover of the outdoors, like most residents of the winterless land, he has hiked over a great deal of both islands. At the close of his talk he was called upon to answer a flood of questions.

EXCHANGE STUDENT
A Rotary exchange student, he is at present staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buckland on the Rutland beach, and is employed in the office of the Rutland sawmill. In coming to Canada, he worked his passage on a German freighter as a steward, and in Canada has worked at many jobs from coast to coast, accounting to working on the green chain in a Carlin mill.

DECIMAL SYSTEM
Mr. MacDonald is accustomed now to the decimal system, and is amazed how simple and easy it makes accounting. When he returns to New Zealand he will have to go back to the cumbersome pounds, shillings and pence. But not for long, for New Zealand, like Australia, is going to change over to dollars and cents.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the speaker for the fine pictures shown, and his interesting talk.

France To Lose $60 Million A Year If Bases Shut Down

PARIS (AP)—Withdrawal of Canadian and U.S. bases from France would mean an annual loss to France of $60,000,000 in official business and 16,000 civilian jobs, the financial newspaper Les Echos says.

In addition, soldiers' spending on everything from home rent to night clubs also would vanish if President de Gaulle goes through with his plan to place any foreign NATO troops on French soil under French national command by 1968. Canada and the U.S. have rejected the proposal, indicating they would move their personnel to other countries.

The worst feature of the expected losses, the newspaper says, is their concentration in areas that lack any other economic activity to take up the slack. The bases generally are located in rural areas with little or no industry where farm conditions are expelling more and more families from the land.

Most of the $60,000,000 goes to small food, transport, maintenance and construction firms around the more than 40 widely-scattered installations where some 26,000 U.S. and 2,120 Canadian military personnel are stationed. Without the bases, many of them may go broke, the newspaper says.

Canada has RCAF strike squadrons at Marville and Metz.

Representatives of 14 NATO countries met without France in Paris to discuss de Gaulle's plan.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	5♠	Pass

Opening lead—jack of spades. This hand was played many years ago. It is not easy to see that declarer can make all 15 tricks against the spade lead.

Readers who enjoy double-dummy problems which simply means that declarer is permitted to look at all four hands in trying to solve the problem are welcome to try this one. Obviously, if declarer were to stake the hand on the club finesse—which would be a reasonable thing to do—he would go down one.

But if declarer either omnisciently or surreptitiously declares that East has both black kings, he can make the contract regardless of how the defense carries on.

Declarer ducks the jack of spades in dummy and wins it with the ace. He then draws five rounds of trumps, discarding the queen of clubs on the fifth one. When he now cashes the A-K-Q of diamonds, this becomes the position:

West		East
♠ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♠ K Q J	♠ A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♠ A
♥ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♥ A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♥ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♥ A K Q J

♣ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♣ A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♣ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2	♣ A K Q J

South next leads the 10 of diamonds to the jack West cannot afford to discard the king of spades because, if he does, declarer will lead the queen from dummy, trapping East's king and West's ten on the same trick and thus promoting the eight into a trick. So let's say that West discards a club.

Dummy wins the diamond and now East feels the pinch. He cannot discard the six of spades because South will ruff the eight, felling the king and making the queen a trick. So East discards the club ten.

Declarer thereupon cashes the ace of clubs and makes the last two tricks with the six of hearts and deuce of clubs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

FOR TOMORROW

Sunday's planetary influences suggest extreme cases in personal relationships. Some adverse aspects put a cloud over romance and could cause tension in family and social circles. Just remember, however, that forewarned is forearmed. So—en garde!

FOR THE BIRTHDAY

If tomorrow is your birthday, the coming year should prove highly stimulating where career and financial interests are concerned. The next four weeks will be especially generous in this connection but after that, do not let down in effort or you could offset gains. In fact, you may experience something of a "slowdown" in occupational interests and some need for retrenching in the financial department during May, June and most of July, but keep plugging—with careful planning and foresight. A bit of a "break" in late September or early October should give your spirits a lift and then you can look happily forward to next January, when you will enter a really excellent three-month cycle for the advancement of all interests.

Social activities and travel will be governed by generous influences from June 1 through September 15; also in October, late December and next January. Romance will be especially favored in early April, late August, late October and late December.

A child born on this day will be a loyal friend and a gay companion; extremely versatile along creative lines.

THE DAY AFTER TOMORROW

Sunday's adverse planetary influences governing personal relationships continue to a degree, so fact will be an absolute necessity in all dealings on Monday. Be especially careful not to tread on the toes of seniors and elderly persons.

FOR THE BIRTHDAY

If Monday is your birthday, your horoscope indicates that ambitious plans, coupled with initiative and determination in carrying them out, could prove highly remunerative before your next birthday rolls around. In fact, the next year will be notable for the strides you can make in improving your financial status. Although you may experience some dull periods in this connection—notably in May and June—do not become discouraged.

As of mid-January, you entered a good period for both job and monetary interests—one which will last until April 15, so go on the beam now and be prepared for the mid-year slowdown. Next good cycle for material interests in 1966: Late September and early October. Then, beginning with January 1, 1967, you will enter a truly excellent three-month cycle for advancing all interests.

Domestic, social and sentimental concerns will be favored for most of the 12 months ahead, with emphasis on romance in early April, late August, late October and late December. Best periods for travel: Between June 1 and September 15, late October and late December.

A child born on this day will be endowed with the talents required to excel as a writer, physician or dealer in fine arts.

TRY AND STOP ME By Bennett Cerf

LOUIS LYAUTET, Marshal of France in the twenties, decided to plant a new tree in his estate one day and urged his gardener to get on with the job. "Calm yourself, Marshal," grumbled the gardener. "Remember this tree won't reach its full height for a hundred years." "All the more reason," nodded the Marshal, "for planting it without one hour's further delay."

In London, Peter Windsor encountered a man who had read Charlotte Brontë's most famous novel eight times—obviously the perfect octo-Jane-Eyrian. Mr. Windsor further reports that a resolution has been introduced in the House of Commons calling for a reduction in the sales tax on long woolen underwear. The name of the member who proposed the move is R. E. Winterbottom.

Overheard at a concert: one nun to another: "I certainly am glad we were able to get these tickets. I was afraid we were going to have to see that film, 'The Sound of Music' again!"

"In times of trial," asked the visiting preacher, "what brings us our greatest comfort?" From the rear of the church came the answer: "An acquittal."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

is LONG FELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

HAPPINESS IS CHASING ABOUT

The canine world which has been hibernating in its snug homes for the past few months, came out barking in March to the joy of dog lovers, and the chagrin of those waiting to take an afternoon stroll. Here two pooches make the best of Friday's sun in a little scamper through Kelowna streets—and gardens.

Scars of Mining Valley Soon To Be Built Over

CAERPHILLY, Wales (CP)—The Welsh Office, adding a touch of Welsh bitterness to his account of the plan. Housing conditions are worse in Wales than in any other part of Britain. Nearly two-thirds of the population's 10,000 homes date from before the First World War and one in three is more than 60 years old. About 200,000 Welsh homes are still without a bathroom. The great gap in house-building came in the depression years, and Wales today has only 120,000 houses built between the wars. Local leaders in Wales feel unless the black legacy of the industrial revolution can be erased from the valleys, English firms will be discouraged from moving in with light industry to replace the decline in coal-mining. Clement stresses that wherever possible in the Aber Valley scheme the purpose will be to preserve what is best of the old and to make the most effective use of housing that perhaps has another 10 years of useful life. Experience gained in transforming the Aber Valley will be handed on in the shape of a report to local authorities facing similar problems. Cerrilly councillor K. Bazzard described the scheme as "a golden opportunity which we are grasping with both hands." "This exercise, I am sure, will prove that the Aber Valley and other similar valleys can become once again beautiful places to live in."

HOME HINTS

PAINTING DARK WOODWORK
QUESTION: The woodwork in the home we have recently purchased is oak and is stained very dark. We would like to paint it the color of the walls. What pre-treatment should be given to prevent chipping?

ANSWER: To prevent paint flaking (or chipping), the surface to which it is applied should be absolutely clean and free of any trace of wax, grease, grime, soot, etc., and any gloss dulled by rubbing down. If you are going to apply a much lighter color paint, a light undercoat should first be applied, then the finish coat.

Ceiling All Washed Up In 'Operation Overhead'

The dust and the grime fly have a mental—as well as physical—block about tackling a dusty, dirt-streaked ceiling. Yet this smooth and unobstructed area is actually easier to wash than many a surface homemakers and their menfolk at eye level.

Painting Metal Radiator Done After Sandpaper Work

QUESTION: We plan to repaint our living room and want to finish the radiator and the metal shelf-cover we have on the radiator to match the walls. The metal cover is a shiny, multi-type finish. How is this repainted?

ANSWER: To create a flat finish on the metal, rub the cover with sandpaper or emery cloth; this will create a surface to which the new coating will adhere better. Be sure that both the radiator and cover are not hot, or even warm, while the new coatings are being applied and until they are thoroughly dried. Be sure all surfaces to be painted are absolutely clean and free of any trace of dust, grime, soot and all loose or flaking paint removed.

KNOCKING SOUND IN PIPE

QUESTION: What must be done to get the knocking sound out of the water pipe? Whenever we run water in the sink or bathroom, there is always a knocking sound. We shut the water off and opened all the faucets to let the air out; then turned the water on to push it out, but the knock is still there. I can't afford to call a plumber.

ANSWER: If the knocking is present while the water is flowing, it may be due to loose, or too few, supports for the horizontal lengths of water pipe. Try tightening these supports in the basement, and adding a few if there seems a distance between supports.

If the knocking occurs immediately upon shutting off the the pails—one with suds thick enough to stand up, and the other with clear rinse water. Now climb the ladder and get to the real task. Scoop up some suds with the scrub brush, and begin washing at one corner of the ceiling. Wash an area only as wide as you can comfortably reach. Stretching too far can cause the ladder to tip, so it's certainly safer to move the ladder more often.

DRIBBLE CONTROL

Rinse each section of ceiling immediately after washing, using a sponge that is just damp to control the dribbles.

Overlap sections as you work, making sure there are no marks to indicate where you finished one area and started another. Wide, smooth strokes of the brush or sponge achieve the most professional results.

Only clean suds and clean rinse water can do a clean job, so empty the pails and refill them as soon as the contents look dirty. Otherwise, you will only smear the dirt around.

When the suds die down, add more soap or detergent and scrub up a fresh batch.
